SENATOR DUBOIS CONFIDENT.

He Thinks Henry M. Teller Can Be Elected President. ST. LOUIS, June 20.-Senator Dubois and Senator Teller had a long conference to-day, but neither would state what its purpose was. In discussing the general vation, however, Senator Dubois spoke with frankness. Said he: "The Democrats now have an opportunity to redeem the dges which they have been making to the people for so many years. We offer senator Teller with the utmost faith. The nght for currency reform cannot be won this year with anybody eise. With the strong anti-free-trade feeling in the middle of the far Western and Northwestern States we could not hope to give the Dem-ocratic ticket, headed by any old-line Demcrat, more than sixteen votes in the Electoral College. But with Senator Teller at the head of the ticket bearing the Demcratic standard and with the organiza-they recognized that in him they found the most complete opposition represented to all tion of the party at his back we are sure most complete opposition represented to all been on trial two weeks. They cannot do it simply because they have not got him. This is plain En-glish. The South will support Teller, and there we have 135 votes that need no at-tention. He saved the South from the orrors of the force bill, and that one act ndears him to the Southern people. With im as a leader a combination of the South and West could be brought about that would be the controlling influence in national affairs for half a century."

COLORADO'S PATRIOTISM. Teller's Bolt to Be Celebrated Instead of Independence Day. DENVER, Col., June 20 .- The great popular ovation by the citizens of Colorado to enator Teller will take place July 4. The committee on arrangements had hoped that Senator Teller would be able to come to Colorado some time next week, but as he ed that he needed rest and would ain with his mother until about July , it was decided to have the reception on the national holiday. There will be a mon-ster parade followed by speeches and in the evening fireworks and a brilliant ilnation. A special feature of the re-on will be the presence of Senators delegates from other States who walked out of the St. Louis convention with Senator Teller. They will be invited to participate in the honor which will be hown the Senator.

Teller Noncommittal. ST. LOUIS, June 20.-Senator Teller was sked to-day whether he would accept her the Democratic or Populist nominaon for President. All that could be had from him was: "I cannot say what I would do under some conditions. I do not want to talk about it."

The hard money plank of ours, while very important, of course, is not the most interesting declaration of principles. From what I have gathered of the general drift of sentiment in this country, I can see nothing but McKinley and protection." Speaking of his own candidacy, Mr. Hobart was very modest and said with a laugh:

That Is Said About McKinley and the Republican Pintform. Copyrighted, 1896, by the Associated Press.) LONDON, June 20. - The result of the Republican convention at St. Louis was generally expected here. Consequently the efinite announcement of Major McKinley's nomination on a gold platform was received with comparative apathy. Financial circles do not regard the outlook as so improved as to justify jubilation. The foreign-relations plank of the platform is regarded as of highly militant character, and apparently it has made the tavestors here somewhat nervous. On this point the Economist remarks: "While the bombastic may mean little and be intended only to tickle the ears of electors, they emind European investors of the possi-lity of American securities being deprived of what has hitherto been regarded as one

The Statist, referring to the same sub-ject, says: "It is the best platform possi-ble, but it will not establish order in the currency, and therefore will not restore e, for it must never be forgotten that the key to the position is held by the Senate, which is governed by a silverite and Populist majority. Unhappliy there is no chance that the composition of the Senate will be materially change for the Senate will be senate for the Senate will be senated by the senate will be senated by the senate will be senated by the senate ate will be materially changed for the present, so the legislature and the administration are powerless."

"He seems to be the typical average man called to a position which gives more scope to individual ability than that of any monarch except the Emperors. There is no need to expect him to set the Atlantic afire, perhaps the jingoes of the party At the least his managers have saved America from disaster and have restored confidence in Europe; whether they have disintegrated the Union is another lestion. But the currency heresies of merica are chronic and their definite deleat on the present occasion may cause them to take on a new form. The Saturday Review thinks the result is "amply reassuring," adding: "The Democrats are not in a position to nominate a angerous competitor to McKinley. With a lver nominee they have no chance and there is a remote possibility that they may follow St. Louis in the appeal for hard money. The sentiment in the East is interesting only because it will involve a big on from both organizations and the ning of a third party devoted to silver and the numerous Populist variations of state socialism, the fortunes of which will be instructive, perhaps edifying to follow.'

CINCINNATI RATIFIES. Senator-Elect Foraker Presides and

Makes a Speech.

CINCINNATI, O., June 20 .- The extremey hot weather made the McKinley ratification meeting at Music Hall rather uncomfortable business to-night. The hall was filled when the president, Senator-elect Foraker, called the meeting to order. Senator Foraker was given an exceedingly enthusiastic reception. He was compelled to speak in spite of his desire to limit his part to presiding. What he said expressed confidence in an overwhelming victory this fall and the future long supremacy of the Republican party. Other speakers were Congressman Bromwell, of the Second Ohio district; D. D. Woodmansee, of this city, and Judge Newby, State Senator of Indiana. In spite of the intense heat many clubs marched in procession through the streets. In the course of his remarks Senator-elect Foraker said:

"I want to take advantage of this opportunity to say: In the first place, it is gratratification meetings head in all the country is this held here in Cincinnati, in the principal city of the State in which Governor McKinley lives. (Applause.) And I am glad it is held here on this spot of so much political historic interest—held in a hall (it is somewhat changed since I last stood on this platform, but we will insist that it is the same old nall) where Governor McKinley has so frequently stood to thrill the Republicans of this country with his matchless eloquence and patriotic ap-peals in benalf of the cause of Republicanism. (Great applause.) So far as our work at St. Louis was concerned in nominating a candidate, nobody is entitled to much credit. We only registered there the will of the American people. (Great applause.) From one end of this country to the other. even in the States that sent delegates to support other candidates, William Mc-Kinley had been nominated for the presidency before the St. Louis convention spoke. (Applause.) He was nomiour river. We who have | ministration we have had at Washington for the last three years. (Cheers and applause.) Major McKinley represented more aspicuously than any other Republican the idea of protection to American industries and American labor, and his election to the presidency will signify to the world more emphatically than any other man's election could that the American people ropose to take care of their industries and orers and let the rest of the world look after itself. In other words, his nomination means that we are determined to return to the policy of a protective tariff and here-after maintain it against all comers.

> The Conquering Hero Returns. CLEVELAND, O., June 20 .- Hon. M. A Hanna arrived home from St. Louis at 2 o'clock this afternoon, accompanied by a part of the Cleveland convention contingent. He was met by six hundred uniformed employes of the street-railroad company, of which he is president, the Tip-pecanoe Club, Mayor McKisson, President Cowles, of the Chamber of Commerce, and other prominent Republicans. Escorted by the club, the street railroad men and two brass bands, the party proceeded to the Tippecanoe Club rooms, being given an ovation along the line of march. At the clubrooms Mayor McKisson made a speech congratulation, and was replied to by Mr. Hanna. Speeches were made also by Hon. S. T. Everett, Myron T. Herrick, An-drew Squire, Maj. C. W. Dick and Judge F. E. Dellenbaugh. An informal reception was then held by Mr. Hanna.

In San Francisco several thousand citizens paraded the principal streets in a torchlight procession, accompanied by bands and fireworks. Speeches were made by prominent Republicans, who predicted the success of the ticket in November.

Who Used the Boodle?

NASHVILLE, Tenn., June 2).-In an interview yesterday Newell Sanders, H. C. Evans's manager in his race for the vice presidential nomination, talked about Mr. Evan's defeat, and said one of the causes was the use of boodle in buying Southern delegates who sold out. He also said that Mr. Hanna personally instructed for Ho-bart, and that Southern leaders were jealous of Mr. Evans's prominence. Sanders says he thinks Evans will get a Cabinet position if Mr. McKinley is elected.

special to the Indianapolis Journal. ANDERSON, Ind., June 20 .- There is every indication that the long summer shutdown of the American wire-rod mills in this ity will be cut much shorter this year than usual. Quite a number of the employes who have contemplated a trip East have been notified to keep within easy calling distance of the mill, as they may be needed soon, and in accordance with that instruction the men have decided to remain in Anderson. It has leaked out here this week also that the wire-nail trust is on the "ragged edge," and may go to pieces at almost any time. The plant in Anderson is one of the largest in the country, the output being 2,500 kegs per day. The company here has been compelled to close on several occasions in order to limit the output, and at each time it was at the instance of the trust. With that restriction removed, the managers could operate their plant to better advantage. The nail department is closed down by the orders of the trust, and it is not thought that the company is sorry that the days of the trust seem numbered.

Crawfordsville Jury Gives Him Five Years in Prison.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. CRAWFORDSVILLE, Ind., June 20 .- The case against Philip Hauk, the school teacher, charged with abetting the crime that caused the death of Grace McClamrock, one of his pupils, was given to the jury this evening. Hauk was charged with taking the young girl to Covington, where county grand jury failed to indict Hauk, but he was indicted by the grand jury here. After three hours' deliberation the jury returned a verdict of guilty, with five years in the penitentiary and $50 fine.

HOT FIGHT FOR DELEGATES. Both Terhune and Johnson Claim Majority for Joint Senator. Special to the Indianapolis Journal. ANDERSON, Ind., June 20 .- All townships in this county held nominating conventions to-day to select delegates to the joint senatorial convention between Madison and Grant in Marion on June 30. The contest was spirited and to-night both candidates are claiming a majority. In this city the convention was presided over by ex-Judge Marcellus A. Chipman, who stirred up great enthusiasm in referring to the ticket selected at St. Louis. W. A. Fulton, deputy county clerk, was secretary. Two tickets were before the convention, known as the Terhune and Johnson tickets. The Terhune delegates were selected by a vote of 188 to 176 and the following will attend the convention from here. N. P. Howard, Frank Watkins, R. P. Grimes, W. J. Alford, John Beesom, W. A. Kittinger, Neil Daugherty, N. J. Harper, J. F. Wild, H. C. Sisco, C. N. Newsome, W. B. Bowman, Forbes Holton, Mose Pierson, H. M. Brelsford, L. R. Longsworth, E. B. Dieses, G. Liller, William Classical R. Pierson, G. Lilly, William Cleveland, R. Kirkpatrick, Jack Longanecker, and D. Wood. Delegates were not instructed and to-night some of Johnson's friends claim five of them will vote for him at the convention. Elwood selected nine delegates. Perhune claims all and Johnson claims five. Alexandria selected eight. Terhune says the delegation will be divided evenly while Johnson claims six. But one of the out townships has been heard from and in that Terhune captured both delegates. Mr. Terhune was a member of the House in the last session of the Legislature from Madison county and served his party as Mayor of Anderson for two terms. Mr. Johnson is a comparatively young man, but has had considerable experience in public affairs and State politics. He was secretary of the central committee of Floyd county before removing to Anderson and has represented the Glass Workers' Association in the national councils on several occasions. Grant county has no choice, as the Senator is conceded to Madison county.

The contestants are warm personal friends, Matthews and Free Silver.

special to the Indianapolis Journal. RICHMOND, Ind., June 20 .- The Democrats of Wayne county met to-day and selected delegates to the State and congressional conventions. Some of the outside townships were not represented at all. The convention indorsed Governor Matthews and free silver.

It had been promised that Muncie should have the largest celebration and fully 5,000 visitors were expected, but instead only 1,000 were here and they had a hard time getting railroad accommodations. I heard the statement made that the railroads, the country over, had declared a boycott on Debs, proposing to kill his as-pirations as a speech-maker by refusing to run excursions to meetings where Debs is advertised to take part.'

The Muncie committee had made ar rangements to have Debs and it was not known until the last minute that he would not be here and the laboring men think that this is the reason the railroads would not run excursions from Anderson, Elwood. Ridgeville Commencement.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. RIDGEVILLE, Ind., June 20.-Commencement week at Ridgeville College has closed, and it was one of the most success ful ever held. Early in the week former students began to arrive to attend the meeting of the alumni association. Prof. Baltz, of Dunkirk, Judge Vaughn, of Bluffton, W. H. Houk, of Marion, Prof, Eagy, of Union City, and others, including Rev. Ainslie, president of the board of trustees, were in attendance. Wednesday was spent in reunions, boating on the beautiful artificial lake, Pequannaha, strolling on the shady banks of the Mississinewa and attending a declamatory contest in the evening. Thursday forenoon a banquet was spread by the citizens. The association was the largest ever held, and steps were taken to raise funds to build a dormitory in the near future. The graduating exercises took place in the evening. Mrs. Pearl Storr, Misses Ella Lent, Sauer, Myrtle Skiver, and Messrs, Harry Barrett, Rex Wood, John Bell and Rev. Jacob Wise were the graduates. Rev. J. B. Silcox, of Chicago, addressed the class. Saturday evening the township schools held their graduating exercises at the college hall and President Hindley delivered an address.

Y., about twenty-five years ago on the charge of starting an incendiary fire, which nearly destroyed the place. Subsequently came his experiments at incendiarism in Mishawaka and Bristoi, in this county. In all these cases there was very little doubt of his guilt, but he was always successful in es-caping. SUCCESS DUE TO HIS WIFE. The Story of How Canal-Boat Captain

Miller Rose. Baltimore Sun. One of the proudest women in Baltimore yesterday was Mrs. Belle Miller, wife of Capt. Samuel H. Miller, of the fine new steam barge Belle Miller, lying at the Frederick-street dock. All day long Mrs. Miller, after whom the vessel is named, was kept busy receiving callers, acknowledging their congratulations, and, between times, get-ting the living apartments of the barge in company. When she first began her career as a mariner the motive power of her husband's vessel was a string of stalwart The finest that ever trod a towsaid the Captain. She soon obtained a full knowledge of the business and assisted in commanding the mules. She was ambitious, and when, four years after, she had become "first officer" on her husband's vessel, Captain Miller became half owner and master of the steam barge Estelle, he was, in a large measure, responsible to her for his ability to pass his examination be-fore the United States steamboat inspect-ors in order to receive a license to "pilot a freight steamer in the canals, the Pa-tapsco river to Sandy Point, and in the Delaware, Hudson and Passaic rivers." Mrs. Miller tells with pride how she and Sam" obtained charts of the waterways and canals, books of rules for licensed steam pilots, a pair of dividers and a par-allel ruler, and, thus equipped, studied hard to prepare for the command of a steamer. Mrs. Miller was the president, dean and faculty of the little nautical school. "We would study our lessons together." she said, "and then I would ask Sam the questions. Whenever he missed one I would send him back and make him study the whole lesson over again.

Thus, by persistent effort and the untir-ing aid of his wife, Captain Miller was able to pass the examination successfully and get a first-class license for the waters he intended to travel in his steam barge. Both the Captain and his wife were sorry to give up the mules that had pulled them through the waterways so many times, but as this is an age of progress and a mule-power boat could not compete with one operated by steam, the mules were sold. The old Estelle is not a beauty. On the contrary, she is, perhaps, one of the most unsightly boats that ever steamed into this harbor, but she did good work and earned enough money for the Captain and his wife to enable them to have built the Belle Miler, which is one of the finest and largest of her type on any of the inland waters along the Atlantic course. If she desired, Mrs. Miller could also obtain a license as a pilot. She was a familiar sight at the wheel of the Estelle in the harbor, and she expects to take a place frequently at the steering gear of the new dy and romance in it than can be found in half a dozen novels. So impressive is it that it-has stirred all Germany, where the scene is laid. Thousands who never read a novel with a purpose have heard of this amentable story, and have learned therefrom a salutary lesson which no novel could teach them with such effect-the lesson, namely, that according as a man sows so shall be visited upon the children even unto the third and fourth generation.

BROUGHT HIM UPON EVIL DAYS. No Luck Attended the German Brewer Who Sold His Wife. New York Herald.

Here is a story of real life with more trag-

There lived in Berlin some years ago a There lived in Berlin some years ago a well-known brewer who had an unusually pretty wife. The brewer's name is an open secret, but it is not divulged, and he is only referred to as H. The pretty wife felt indisposed one day and a servant was sent for a physician. Dr. S., who lived close by, responded to the call, and the remedies used by him were so effectual that Mrs. H. was soon as well as ever. The physician, however, kept on calling, and soon it became evident that he and the brewer's wife had become warmly attached to each other. The physician was unmarried, and the only Charles Clay, of this city. Was referee.

apparent bar to his happiness was the rigid fact that the adored one was alread; rigid fact that the adored one was already the wife of another. Dr. S. pondered the matter deeply and finally took a bold step. Going to the brewer, he asked him point blank on what terms he would surrender all claims to his wife—in other words, how much he would take for her in solid cash! To this question the brewer gave a prompt answer. Knowing that his wife loved the physician and cared no more for him he physician and cared no more for him, he expressed his willingness to dispose of her for 90,000 marks. This offer was accepted.

The physician paid the money and married the wife and the brewer continued to live alone with his only child, a boy. Evil days, however, were dawning for the brewer. He fancied that he could live at ease on the interest of the money obtained in this infamous manner, and so he dis-Atlantic express on the Pennsylvania ran into a freight near Wall's Station, sixteen miles east of here, early this morning, derailing the two engines, two express cars, the combination car and one sleeper. For sician died about the same time. The brewer's property, including the in-famous purchase money, for which he had bartered his wife, was divided between his

The income therefrom was very satisfactory, but he soon became dissatisfied with the business, and so he sold it and determined to live on the interest of his money, which included the 90,000 marks for which his mother had been sold. His next step was to marry a pretty but otherwise undesirable waitress. take, and, like his father and uncle, took His pretty young widow came into possession of the ill-starred property, and straightway started to spend it most lavishly. She kept open house, surrounded herself with all the luxuries that money can buy, and in a short time became the Much of the property had disappeared by this time, and she and her husband went to Potsdam, where they opened a fash-ionable wineroom. The ex-waltress presided over this establishment, and by he beauty and seductive wiles soon attracted a host of customers. So, from generation to generation, this shameless blood money, this money fixed by a husband as the price of his own wife, has wrought incalculable mischief, and the story of the ruin which it has caused teaches a lesson which is not likely to be soon forgotten.

AN INVENTIVE CALIFORNIA LAD. His Bicycle Light Too Bright for the Police to Allow.

San Francisco Call. George H. Woodbury, the sixteen-year-old son of George E. Woodbury, manufacturer of ore concentrators, has just per formed a feat of mechanical skill would do credit to one many years his senior. It is not every boy that can design and put up a boiler and engine complete in all its workings, and capable of propelling a boat through the water from twelve to fifteen miles an hour. This is what the lad has accomplished.

He is at present a student at Anderson's Preparatory School, at Sixteenth and Guerrero streets, preparing himself to take the mining and civil engineering course at the State University.

Young Woodbury is thoroughly conver-sant with all the workings of an engine, and can run one as intelligently as a licensed engineer. He is now putting his machinery into a launch which he had built by George W. Kneass. He expects when everything is in working order that the boat will beat anything of her size on the bay. She is twenty-three feet long. four feet beam and four feet, six inches deep, and is called the Allegre. In addition to building engines and bollers the boy is somewhat of an inventor, and has got up an electric light for a bicycle that can be put into successful operation. He has ridden with this contrivance attached to his own bike up Golden Gate avenue several times, but every time he appeared on the avenue the police drove him off, as the light resembled a miniature lighthouse coming along and caused too held to-day, all business and work being suspended. The city is in mourning. Joel O'Mans, boiler inspector of Utica, says the accident was caused by the giving away of the boiler flues, which had long been in a dangerous condition, and also that the boiler heads were not braced as they should with other and between the crossbare is with ether and between the crossbars is arranged a neat little battery. Wires connect with the oxygen tubes and the ether, and when in motion the wheel generates its own light. But a wheel equipped with this contrivance is rather too heavy to be practicable, so the boy intends to emilinate some of this weight, and have a light on his wheel that will show obstacles ahead. "It is my natural bent to cultivate a liking for machinery," said young Woodbury. "My father followed a machinist's vocation, and I naturally inherit from him. I built my engine and boiler after school hours at my father's shop, and outside of a little help from some of the men employed there, everything is of my own design and construction. I have been knocking around the shop from the time I have

Is There Another Life? Prof. Goldwin Smith, in the Forum. Is there any voice in our nature which distinctly tells us that death is not the end? If there is, there seems to be no reason why we should not listen to it, even though its message may be incapable of verification such as in regard to a material hypothesis is required by physical science. That the intelligence of our five senses, of which science is the systematized record, is exhaustive, we have, it must once more be said, no apparent ground for as-suming; the probability seems to be the other way. It seems likely that our senses, mere nerves, even, if completely evolved, are imperfect monitors, and that we may be living in a universe of which we really know as little as the mole—which no doubt seems to itself to perceive everything that s perceptible-knows of the world of sight. Now, there does seem to be a voice in every man which, if he will listen to it, tells him that his account is not closed at death. The good man, however unfortunate he may have been, and even though he may not have found integrity profitable, feels at the end of life a satisfaction in his past and an assurance that in the sum of things he will find that he has chosen aright. The most obdurately wicked man, however his wickedness may have prospered, will probably wish, when he comes to die, that he had lived the life of the righteous. It may be possible to explain the sanctions or warnings of conscience generally as the influence of human opinion reflected in the individual mind, transmitted perhaps by inheritance and accumulated in transmission. But such an explanation will hardly cover the case of deathbed self-approbation or remorse. There seems to be no reason why we should not trust the normal indications of our moral nature as well as the normal indi-cations of our bodily sense; and against the belief that the greatest benefactors and the greatest enemies of mankind rot at last in the same grave our moral nature vehemently rebels.

Jerry O'Connor Assaulted.

Jerry O'Connor, a young man of eighteen years, son of Councilman O'Connor was assaulted at the corner of Noble and Washington streets at 11 o'clock last night. He and a friend were walking along the street when some one spoke to them. Young O'Connor turned to shake hands with the stranger, and just as he was turning away to leave the man he was dealt a vicious blow in the face. His nose was broken by the blow. He did not know his assailand nor the cause of the assault. Police Surgeon Courteney dressed the injury.

Knocked Down by a Wheelman. William Thompson, of No. 294 East Merrill street, was struck by a wheelman at the corner of Merrill and East streets near midnight last night, knocked down and suffered the fracture of an arm. The wheelman rode away. The police have his address. He lives on Elm street.
